What Is Manifest Confidentiality?

Under 19 CFR §103.31, importers, consignees, and shippers can file to have their names and addresses removed from public vessel manifests.

The program safeguards:

- Importer and consignee details.
- Supplier and shipper information.
- Cargo and container identifiers.
- 22 key trade data elements that competitors could exploit.

Confidentiality remains valid for two years and is renewable indefinitely when properly managed.

The Hidden Exposure in Trade Data

Every U.S. ocean shipment's manifest data becomes public within days revealing critical details like supplier names, customer addresses, and cargo descriptions.

This information is aggregated, sold, and analyzed by competitors, data brokers, and sourcing firms. The result?

- Loss of supplier exclusivity.
- Replication of your sourcing strategy.
- Compromised client confidentiality.

The solution: Manifest Confidentiality. Beyond Clearance ensures your trade data stays confidential legally and efficiently.

Why It Matters

Your supply chain is an intellectual property asset. Without confidentiality protection, you expose your:

- Supplier network and product origins.
- Customer relationships and shipment patterns.
- Strategic sourcing and logistics intelligence

Once that data is public, it can't be retracted and competitors gain insight into your entire trade strategy.
